Chapter 1 by Erica Bidol

One day I Will be Gone,
and i will never come back,
I will die

Chapter 2 by thefluffyone

My Life

Life is not forever,
That I know,
I know I will not live forever.

No one lives forever,
Immunity is impossible,
Yet I want to believe.

Will you remember me?
When I'm gone?

When I've died?

Chapter 3 by thefluffyone

When I do not exist?

When I am no longer of this world?

When I have left?

But when I leave
just remember
I did not decide.

I did not decide to die.
I did not mean to leave you here.
I would never want to leave you here alone.

Because I know you.
And I know I love you.
And I know you love me.

So maybe, when I die
When I pass,
maybe you shouldn't remember me.

Maybe I should spare some pain
And maybe, just maybe you should forget.

Chapter 4 by celestac

I'd like to think that forgetting
will make the pain go away
That when I leave
you'll carry on
But, my dear,
perhaps you shouldn't forget
Forgetting is diving

with me

I prayed to god for life beyond once my life had played
And now know I'll go to heaven once I hit the grave
So my dear we still can meet just say a little prayer
And say it from your heart to show him you really care
Forget about your earthly gear cause it doesn't mean a thing
We'll live in a mansion with streets of gold and hear the angels sing
My time now is near my dear it seems it went so fast,
My pain is great and death can't wait it's knocking at my door
But I'll be in a place I won't be late with all God's love and more

Chapter 6 by Rainyday

yet all of us come to an end,
For me it is coming soon,
I whisper my secrets to the wind,
cry my pain to the moon.

Time drags on as we all slowly die,
closer and closer comes judgement day,
and inside the Earth my body will lie,
what then comes next I can not say.

But life is a gift for which I will fight
I resolve to stand strong with no fears,
I will rage against the dying light,

and I live hard in these dying years.

Chapter 7 by Rainyday

Will I weep no more, regret or passed deaths doot, will words unspoken still be my bane?

Chapter 8 by Jayde Avalon

Sometimes I hear you cry,
And wish not I, but you, would die.
I went the wrong way--it's all my fault,
But now I cannot make it halt.
So when it's time for me to die,
I beg you, Mother, please don't cry.
It never was your fault
That I looked back and turned to salt.

I'm ruining our lives,
Don't know if we'll survive.
Let me go, please don't give in;
A screwup doesn't win.
If I go, you could still survive
And repair your broken lives,
Yours, and Father's, those who gave in,
The lives I've tainted with my sin.

It tears my soul apart
To know I crushed and broke your heart,
To see you cry so hard and long,
And wonder "Where did I go wrong?"
I never meant to break your heart--
It kills me that we're torn apart.
Just--please--don't forget when days grow long,
That I love you, Mother--I've loved you all along.

the end
